FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE / February 7, 2020

UC SANTA BARBARA CONTINUING LECTURER NATASHA KISLENKO TO PRESENT SOLO PIANO WORKS BY MOZART, CHOPIN, RACHMANINOFF, AND SCHNITTEK

Internationally-renowned pianist to present solo piano works along with Lutosławski’s Variations on the GH theme by Paganini for two pianos with UC Santa Barbara Teaching Professor Sarah Gibson

Santa Barbara, CA (February 7, 2020)—Natasha Kislenko, Continuing Lecturer of Keyboard at UC Santa Barbara, will present a solo piano recital on Friday, February 21, 2020 at 7:30 pm in Karl Geiringer Hall on the UC Santa Barbara campus. The program will include solo piano works by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Frédéric Chopin, Sergei Rachmaninoff, and Alfred Schnittke, plus a duo-piano work by Witold Lutosławski, featuring UC Santa Barbara Teaching Professor Sarah Gibson.

Recognized by the Santa Barbara Independent for her “vividly expressive” interpretations and “virtuosity that left the audience exhilarated,” Kislenko offers unique concert programs and presentations to a worldwide community of music listeners. A prizewinner of several international piano competitions, she has extensively concertized in Russia, Germany, Italy, Spain, Slovakia, Bulgaria, Turkey, and across the Americas. A resident pianist of the Santa Barbara Symphony since 2010, she has been a featured soloist for the Shostakovich, Grieg, Clara Schumann, de Falla, and Mozart piano concerti, to great critical acclaim.

Kislenko’s UC Santa Barbara program will open with Mozart’s Six Variations in F Major on “Salve tu, Domine” by G. Paisiello, K. 398. The theme of the work is taken from Mozart’s Italian contemporary Giovanni Paisiello’s opera, I filosofi immaginari (The Imaginary Philosophers), one of Paisiello’s most recognized opere buffe, written for the court of Catherine II of Russia. Kislenko will then present Chopin’s Souvenir de Paganini, a delightful work reminiscent of the traditional folk song sung by Venetian gondoliers, the barcarolle, in homage to the legendary Italian violinist, Niccolò Paganini.

Kislenko will also present Rachmaninoff’s Variations on a Theme by Corelli, Op. 42. Dedicated in 1931 to Austrian-born violinist and composer Fritz Kreisler, Rachmaninoff’s work opens with a delicate theme in the upper range of the piano, followed by an intensity and technicality that is evident in many of the 20 variations and coda. The piece is based on a Baroque theme by Italian composer and violinist Arcangelo Corelli, who lived from 1653-1713 and was instrumental in the development of the modern concerto and sonata forms. Kislenko will close out the solo piano portion of the program with German-Soviet composer Alfred Schnittke’s Variations on One Chord (1966), a work representative of Schnittke’s foray into serialism, which was partially inspired by Italian composer Luigi Nono’s visit to the USSR in the 1960s.

The program will conclude with Polish composer and orchestral conductor Witold Lutosławski’s Variations on the GH theme by Paganini, for two pianos, performed by Kislenko and UC Santa Barbara Teaching Professor Dr. Sarah Gibson. The riveting work explores the infamous theme and over the top technicality characteristic of Paganini’s compositions, through the postmodern lens of Lutosławski.
